Janet Paulsen is a mother, career woman, athlete and a survivor of domestic violence. On November 5, 2015, Janet was shot 6 times which caused her to be partially paralyzed in her right leg due to a spinal cord injury by her then husband of 15 years who was abusive and an alcoholic. To survive, Janet underwent multiple surgeries and extensive physical therapy and now has chosen to live her life to the fullest by taking care of her boys, participating in sports such scuba diving and water skiing and by being a voice for others living in similar situations. In sharing her story she empowers other survivors and victims by providing valuable insight into her experience of navigating through an imperfect system. This information helps to shed light on existing gaps and will allow professionals who serve victims with ideas of how to make improvements that could help save lives.
