August

Once again we are jumping back into our training schedule. August is still a little slow as we are finishing up family vacations and other summer events. Families spending all their evenings at the ball fields with kids. Once September gets here we are jumping in with full force though.

In the last month I have entered many other classes so if you have not had a chance to look at the training schedule in a while, this is a great chance. The FY25 calendar is just about complete. I allow for some wiggle room to insert classes at the end of the fiscal year. With the three year deadlines approaching at the end of June 2025, we may need to insert more role play training courses. If you have not done your required hours of role play training, now is great time to jump into the fall classes.

We thank you again and look forward to seeing you all in training.

In-House Training Update

Trainers– Before holding in-house training. Please call and schedule with the MTU. I'm asking for at least 2 weeks notice. We are being asked to attend your training and fill out an "audit" form to evaluate the training. We need a couple of weeks if possible in order to arrange schedules so that one of us are available to attend if possible.

If you have any questions, please feel free to give us a call or drop us an email.

MTU 13 Facebook Page

Many of you may know that at one time, MTU 13 had a Facebook page. Since I have been in this position, I have been unable to locate username and passwords for that account. Kelsey has been putting together a new group page.

The former account, which is still up, was called "MTU 13". The new Facebook page is "East Central Illinois Mobile Law Enforcement Training Team-MTU 13". This will be a closed group, open only to law enforcement.

This QR code should take you to a sign up page where you will be approved after it's confirmed you are in the law enforcement family.

The FBINAA Leadership Certification Program

This certification is a series of courses, open to all law enforcement professionals and will encompass the latest strategies, techniques and real-world leadership scenarios to prepare each attendee to better lead their respective unit, shift or agency into the unpredictable future of law enforcement.

This program was developed in conjunction with Strategic Alliance, Legal and Liability Risk Management Institute, to continue to develop Gold Standard law enforcement leaders across the country during these critical times.

This is one of the three classes needed for the FBINAA Leadership Certification Program. If you came to the class "Mastering the Leadership Challenge", this is one of the two classes that you need. Only a few have had both of them. I'm working with the FBINA in Quantico Va., to get the last class as we speak.

- Procedural Justice
- Supervising Diversity

Northwestern University Center for Public Safety provides the highest caliber education available for law enforcement supervisors and managers. The journey begins with Supervision of Police Personnel.

Supervision of Police Personnel (SPP) teaches essential supervisory and managerial skills. Designed for officers with little or no formal supervisory training, our authoritative curriculum focuses on such critical topics as:

- Day-to-day work relationships with subordinates, superiors, and the public;
- Managing the leadership challenges that law enforcement supervisors frequently encounter;
- Understanding human behavior as it relates to law enforcement management;
- Mastering communication techniques;
- Much more!

Students complete this two-week course with the understanding that knowing what action to take — and how to implement that action — can be the difference between success or failure on the street or in the office.

4 Clever Ways to Beat Back Negative Thoughts

Simon Sinek Blog— June 27th, 2024

All of us grapple with that little inner voice whispering doubts and fears. I don't know what I'm doing. What if these numbers are wrong? I'm in over my head... This plan would never work. It's as if we all have an internal saboteur on our payroll, working tirelessly to chip away at our confidence.

Dr. Judy Ho, a triple board-certified clinical psychologist—and an Optimist instructor who teaches the class, “Stop Self Sabotage and Achieve Lasting Success”—would like to help us all deal with it. Dr. Judy, renowned for her practical and scientifically grounded approaches, teaches us how to turn our inner critic into a supportive ally and offers a few powerful strategies to conquer self-sabotage.

“Thoughts do not always equal the truth,” Dr. Judy says, “Self-sabotage happens when we start prioritizing those thoughts and replacing the truth entirely.” So when we start to feel those self-sabotaging thoughts begin to form, it’s all about shifting our perspective... and there are four different ways we can do it.

1. Put Our Thoughts “On Trial”

A negative thought crosses our minds. We ask ourselves, “Is this thought factual?”

For instance, if we think, “I’m never good at presentations,” we challenge this by looking for evidence. Have there really been no instances where we’ve done well? Adjusting this thought could look like, “Sometimes I feel nervous about presentations, but I have received positive feedback before.”

2. Modify Our Thoughts to Be More Balanced

Once we’ve questioned our thoughts, it’s time to modify them. This involves reshaping them to be more balanced.

For example, take the thought, “I can’t handle this project; it’s too complex.” Instead, we try thinking, “The project is challenging, but I can handle parts of it well and can seek help for the rest.”

This approach acknowledges difficulty without dismissing our capabilities.

3. Take the Sting Out of Our Thoughts by Labeling Them

We can minimize their impact by labeling them as mere mental events.

So, for instance, the thought, “I’m going to fail,” can be transformed by thinking, “I’m having the thought that I might fail.”

This simple tweak helps us see the thought as not an inevitable truth but a fleeting feeling.

4. Inject Positivity Where We Can

If the original thought is, “I don’t have what it takes to succeed,” we begin our morning by listing our strengths and recent successes. Change this to, “I have succeeded before, and I have the specific skills and experiences to help me succeed again.”

In other words, we take our self-doubting thoughts and turn them into an opportunity to empower ourselves. We rewrite the narrative, silencing the inner saboteur and transforming it into an ally that highlights our capabilities and potential. The goal isn’t to never have negative thoughts, but to change how we interact with them.

Why do I bother?

I've been told that many people don't read the newsletter; they just look for upcoming training events. So, why have I spent the last six years publishing articles that most people won't read? The answer is simple: for the few who do. I don't see my job as simply scheduling training, I see myself positioned to help officers help themselves and their communities. I don't conduct training for the purpose of “mandates”, I provide training that I believe will keep officers alive and enable them to touch the lives of someone in their community. Mandates are a distant reason for conducting training.

The few who take the time to read leadership articles (and books) are willing to put in a bit more effort into their lives and careers. They are striving to build trust within their communities and organizations. These officers are always seeking ways to better themselves to help those around them. This pursuit of self-improvement and helping others is the backbone of leadership. Those officers will excel, and I want to do what I can to help them.

I may not get you to read Simon Sinek's book “Start with Why,” but if you read the short articles I've provided, you might pick up valuable principles. I may not get your to read John Maxwell's, “Five Levels of Leadership”, but by reading every article, you'll be introduced to in-depth leadership principles. Reading all the articles, exposes you to the ideas of John Maxwell, Stephen Covey, Simon Sinek, and many other influential thinkers in the field of leadership and organizational development.

How Can This Help You Right Now?

Consider this scenario: you're in a police promotion interview, and they ask, “How do you handle stressful projects on the job?” With the knowledge you've gained through these articles, you can offer a thoughtful, in-depth response. You could say, “When confronted by a stressful problem or project, I think back to what Simon Sinek said about handling stress. I take his advice and break the problem into manageable pieces, tackling the parts I understand best. For the other parts, I reach out to those who may know more. I've found that bringing people together offers the best chance of success. Once I break the problem down into smaller bites, it becomes less stressful and I gain the opportunity to work with others.”

This answer shows the interviewers that you read leadership books and that you can work collaboratively to accomplish tasks. Every interview committee wants to see that you value teamwork and collaboration because leadership is about working with others. This makes the organization just plain better.

If you took the time to read this message, thank you, and please respond to this email with a “got it”, to let me know how many people took the time.

Take the Pledge

Without solidarity, acknowledgement and honor– stigma, silence and denial remain. By taking the pledge each year, you are committing to: publicly show your support for prevention of law enforcement suicide; support for the officers who are suffering and; honoring the memory of those we have lost. Anyone can pledge, you don't have to be an officer; you simply need to be committed to eradicating the stigma.

I Pledge To:

- Make emotional wellness a priority for myself, my family and/or my fellow officers;
- Seek Assistance when I may be in need of support– for work or personal pressures;
- Confidentially contribute suicide information to aide in accurate data.

Illinois Active Threat Master Instructor Certification Program

This first in the nation cooperative training and instructor certification process provides the knowledge, specialized skill sets, and associated instructor materials for graduates to develop, implement, and entire ILETSB State Certified Active Threat Response Training Curriculum.

By providing all first responders in Illinois with commonality of training, tactics, techniques, verbiage and capabilities, the program will greatly enhance an officer's ability to immediately respond and work cohesively during violent active threat criminal events.

Graduates of this 4-week program will earn Master Instructor Certification in:

Active Threat / Immediate Action	Urban Tactics / MACTAC
Solo Officer Response	Rescue Task Force
High Risk Patrol Tactics	Use of Force
High Risk Traffic Stops	Scenario Based Instructor & Safety Officer

Cost: The Tuition / Lodging / Many Meals / Instructors / Range / Course Material / Marking Rounds / Training Equipment will be provided by funding from ILETSB and managed by the Executive Institute. Travel, live ammunition and some meals will be the responsibility of each student.

Recognizing the potential significance of a full 4-week training commitment, students will attend one week of training, followed by multiple weeks of regular duty at their home agency before returning for subsequent weeks of training. Hopefully this schedule will accommodate the variety of staffing requirements for each attendee's home agency.

Tentative Dates & Location:

March 10-14, 2025:	ICAT, 3120 South Business Route 51, Decatur IL
April 7-11, 2025:	Southwest Illinois College, Belleville IL
April 28 – May 2, 2025:	Marseilles NG Base, Ottawa IL. & Evanston IL.
May 13-17, 2025:	T1G Crawfordville, Arkansas

Those interested in attending are required to submit an application packet to include a resume, curriculum vitae and copies of all relevant certificates as detailed in the attached "Course Information and Student Prerequisite" document.

Please submit your application packet to Derek Carle at the ILETSB Executive Institute:
dwc-carle@wiu.edu
